

THE STATE AVIATION
SCHOOL AT RICHMOND,
SYDNEY, N.S.W. ~

AT THE STATE AVIATION SCHOOL, RICHMOND, N.S.W.—Top photo.: the hangars. Centre: the quarters of staff and pupils. Below: some of the pupils, with Chief Instructor Stutt in centre, in front of the 90 h.p. Curtiss School machine. New South Wales was very early alive to the important part which aircraft would perform in the present war, and not only did the Government of that State establish a school of aviation for the training of pilots, but there has been a continuous movement for the presentation of battleplanes to the Empire, thirty-eight machines of this kind having been presented by New South Wales to the Imperial Government.