Controller - Technical Information

Working with us is an intense and liberating experience - our people thrive in a climate of group responsibility and an informal, open culture. That same group responsibility goes hand in hand with shared expertise and knowledge. And that's where our Operations Information team comes in.

Your role will focus on controlling the distribution and delivery of technical, operational and procedural information to end-users, including aircrew and ground teams. It's all about logistics; you will improve the systems for information control and cataloguing methods, including revision status and change control, prepare publications for electronic and paper-based delivery, and manage subsequent distribution. Above all, we pride ourselves on innovation, so embracing new technologies and challenging conventional thinking will be key to your success.

Self-motivation and drive are vital attributes. You'll need significant technical document management experience, preferably gained in the airline industry. You'll also have experience of technical library control methods and be comfortable with computer applications. In return, we'll give you the chance to immerse yourself in our legendary 'orange' culture, develop your expertise and grow with us, and enjoy all the benefits you'd expect from one of the world's most successful and innovative airlines.

Please send your application to Taylor Bradbury, Operations Information Services Manager, enclosing your CV, salary expectations and a covering letter stating why you are interested in the role, at easyJet airlines, easyLand, London Luton Airport, Luton, Bedfordshire LU2 9LS. Email: operations@easyjet.com no later than Monday 6th August 2001.
