COMPONENT TECHNICAL ENGINEER (AVIONICS)

Channel Express is a well established and growing European airline, operating a fleet of Airbus A300B4, Boeing B737-300 and Fokker F27 aircraft on both cargo and passenger contracts.

To help us maintain our high level of performance, we have an opportunity for a Component Technical Engineer (Avionics). The successful candidate will take on a variety of challenging projects and tasks, including:

- surveillance of avionic component reliability and trend monitoring
- review of avionic component maintenance intervals and procedures
- administration of component logistics and organisation of third-party component repairs
- liaison with aircraft manufacturers, component suppliers and maintenance contractors
- assistance with aircraft avionic modification projects

Based at the company's Bournemouth International Airport headquarters, the successful candidate will benefit from the excellent quality of life offered by the surrounding countryside and coastal areas.

To be effective in this position you will ideally have:

- a degree, diploma or equivalent in Electrical / Aeronautical engineering, or experience in avionic component maintenance/product support
- an analytical and proactive approach to problem solving, coupled with close attention to detail
- the ability to contribute to a close-knit, commercially aware team, with the flexibility to work independently when the need arises
- clear verbal communication and report writing skills
- familiarity with Microsoft Office (Word, Excel and Access).

This role will appeal to those with a real interest in aircraft engineering and will involve some travel.

To apply, please send your details, along with an indication of your salary expectations to Maura Faithfull, Personnel Manager, Channel Express (Air Services) Limited, Building 470, Bournemouth International Airport, Christchurch, Dorset, BH23 6SE, fax 01202 593956.
