

PROTECTION

The frilled lizard is really quite harmless and if you come any nearer is ready to take to his heels. This is his bogey act and he knows that it often succeeds. Quickly spreading his bright coloured throat pouch he pretends he's a dragon, hissing meanwhile his strong disapproval of further proceedings. It is pure bluff, of course, but the ruse does protect him from frontal attack. Conversely, the protection Titanine gives against rust, rot and corrosion is very real. Remember—protecting the surface preserves the rest.
