

S.A.C.

The play of light and reflection endows the photograph above with an almost mystical quality. It is, in fact, the camera's view of a KC-97/B-47 refuelling operation, with the pilot of the B-47 seen actually closing in on the boom. The picture is wonderfully symbolic of the global operations of the U.S.A.F.'s Strategic Air Command (S.A.C.); and the smaller views—showing navigation satchels being picked up and a crew running to their aircraft—are evocative of the security measures and alertness which are so characteristic of the mighty Command which of late has been so often in the world's headlines.
