

Designed to meet airline needs well into the next century, over 300 Airbus A320s are already in service throughout the world, giving outstanding performance on short to medium range flights.

Airlines recognise the financial benefits of an all-new aircraft which offers greater fuel economy and lower operating costs than any of its competitors. Having the widest fuselage in its category, the A320 provides more comfort for passengers and more volume for underfloor cargo.

The A320 is now proving its operating efficiency in environments from the desert to the Arctic, from the boardroom to the flight deck and from the cabin to the cargo hold.

Airlines such as Excalibur, Lufthansa, Cyprus Airways and Egyptair are among nearly 40 customers who have chosen the A320 for its unmatched economics and performance.
